

Me Who Dove Into The Heart Of The World

By Carlos Castañeda

I was born in a small village in the mountains of Peru. My parents were farmers, and I grew up working in the fields. When I was 12 years old, I left home to find work in the city. I worked as a waiter, a cook, and a construction worker. I also spent time in prison.

In 1972, I met Carlos Castañeda. He was an anthropologist who had written a book about his experiences with a group of Yaqui Indians. I was fascinated by his book, and I asked him to teach me what he knew.

Castañeda agreed to teach me, but only if I was willing to give up everything I knew and become a warrior. I agreed to his terms, and I began my training.

Castañeda taught me about the nature of reality, the power of the mind, and the importance of intention. He also taught me how to use plants to alter my consciousness.

I spent the next 10 years training with Castañeda. During that time, I learned how to see the world in a new way. I learned how to control my mind and my body. And I learned how to use my power to help others.

In 1982, Castañeda died. I was devastated by his death, but I knew that my training had prepared me to continue on my own.

Since then, I have continued to teach the Toltec tradition. I have written several books, and I have lectured all over the world. I am dedicated to helping others to find their own power and to live their lives to the fullest.

The Toltec Tradition

The Toltec tradition is a system of knowledge and practices that was developed by the Toltecs, an ancient civilization that lived in Mexico. The Toltecs were known for their wisdom and their ability to control their minds and bodies.

The Toltec tradition is based on the belief that the world is a dream. The only thing that is real is our own consciousness. We create our own reality through our beliefs and intentions.

The Toltec tradition teaches us how to use our consciousness to create a better world. We can learn how to heal ourselves, how to achieve our goals, and how to find happiness.

The Four Agreements

The Four Agreements are a set of principles that were taught by the Toltecs. They are:

1. Be impeccable with your word.
2. Don't take anything personally.
3. Don't make assumptions.
4. Always do your best.

The Four Agreements are a powerful tool for personal transformation. They can help us to live more conscious and fulfilling lives.

The Journey of the Warrior

The journey of the warrior is a path of self-discovery and self-mastery. It is a journey that requires courage, determination, and a willingness to face our own fears.

The journey of the warrior begins with the realization that we are all capable of greatness. We all have the potential to achieve our dreams and to make a difference in the world.

The journey of the warrior is not easy. There will be times when we will fall down. There will be times when we will doubt ourselves. But if we are willing to persevere, we will eventually reach our destination.

I am a warrior. I have walked the path of self-discovery and self-mastery. I have learned how to use my power to help others. And I am dedicated to helping others to find their own power and to live their lives to the fullest.

The journey of the warrior is not for everyone. But if you are willing to face your fears and to push yourself to the limit, then I invite you to join me on this journey.
