Plot Summary

Thirteen Moons begins in 1817, when Bear is a young woman living in the Cherokee Nation in what is now Tennessee. Bear is a skilled hunter and a respected member of her community. However, her life is turned upside down when the United States government begins to pressure the Cherokee to give up their land and move west.

Bear and her family are forced to leave their home and embark on the Trail of Tears, a brutal journey that takes them thousands of miles away from their ancestral lands. Along the way, Bear witnesses the death and suffering of her people. However, she also finds strength and hope in the resilience of her community.

After arriving in Oklahoma, Bear and her family must start over in a new land. They face many challenges, but they eventually rebuild their lives and find a new sense of home.
