Tara Riches was the love of my life. We met in college, and I fell head over heels for her the moment I saw her. She was beautiful, intelligent, and funny, and she made me feel like I could be myself around her. We dated for four years, and during that time we shared some of the best moments of our lives.

But then Tara graduated and moved away to start a new job. We tried to make long distance work, but it was hard. We saw less and less of each other, and we started to drift apart. Eventually, we broke up, and I was heartbroken.

I thought I would never get over Tara. But then I met someone else, and we fell in love. We got married and had a family, and I was happy. But even though I was happy with my new life, I never forgot about Tara.

Years later, I got a call from Tara. She said she was coming back to town for a visit, and she wanted to see me. I was hesitant at first, but I agreed to meet her. We met for coffee, and it was like no time had passed at all. We talked for hours, and I felt the same spark between us that I had felt all those years ago.

Tara told me that she had never stopped loving me. She said that she had made a mistake when she broke up with me, and she wanted to give us another chance. I was hesitant at first, but I eventually agreed to give it a try.

We started dating again, and it was like we had never been apart. We were both older and wiser now, and we appreciated each other more than ever before. We got married a year later, and we have been together ever since.

I am so grateful that Tara came back into my life. She is the love of my life, and I can't imagine my life without her. I know that we will be together forever, and I am so lucky to have her in my life.
